A FARMER'S DEEDS.

Shot His Daughter and Her Culver, Then Committed Suicide.

Henderson, Ky., March 6.—Allen Melton, a well-to-do farmer, yesterday shot his daughter and her lover, John Culver, and then committed suicide. The shooting took place in a barn which had been converted into a residence. Melton, who was 55 years of age, was spending the night. Culver was away from the house. Melton entered and seeing his daughter and her lover, he fired two shots. Mrs. Culver ran into the room and Melton fired, the ball passing through her lungs. Melton went to the home of Dick Latta, two miles away, where he remained all night. Early Thursday morning he went home and Melton's bloodstained shirt was found in the barn. When he heard them coming he swallowed a large amount of poison and then shot himself through the head, falling dead. It is said he tried to hang his daughter and her lover, but he was returned to Union to his wife. It is thought the reason he did not suicide was to shoot the girl.

THREE BOYS SHOT.

They Were Wounded as They Were Crossing Suspension Bridge.

Covington, Ky., March 5.—Three Covington lads were shot Wednesday afternoon as they were crossing the suspension bridge by a man who stood on a wharfboat alongside the Ohio shore, 200 feet away and below them. Two of the boys were taken to the city hospital, one home. The third was able to go to his home. The injured boys are James Pence, of Pleasant street, Covington; and Lawrence Pence, of Pleasant street, of 1023 Highland, a laborer, of 46 Perry street, and a boy, whose name was not given. The shooting was a most unusual one. The boys were the victims, it is claimed, of John Collins, known as "Red Collins," a river-front character, who, it is said, shot the boys as they were crossing the bridge on their way home because he thought some of them were throwing stones at him. Other persons passing on the bridge saw the narrow escape from being injured by the shot.
